TOOK FATAL ROSE BY ACCIDENT

Farm Hand in Horscham drank Carbolio Acid for Whiskey—He Died in a Short Time—A Destitute Widow and Five Small Children are Left.

A fatal mistake caused the death of George Ream, of the Whitmer milk farm, in Horscham, on Friday. Ream was 45 years old, married, and leaves five children. He was employed as farm hand by R. F. Whittier on his large farm, and the family resides in a tenant house on the place. It was about milking time when the men were all in the barn, Ream, it is reported, reached for what he thought was a bottle of whiskey and took a large swallow. The bottle, however, contained carbolic acid, and Ream fell to the floor in a stupor. Dr. A. F. Stafford, of Horscham, was sent for but the man never regained consciousness, and died about an hour after taking the fatal dose. Ream is known in Hatboro, where for a year or more he was employed on the Dr. Seltzer family farm, Corner King, of Montgomery county, with his physician, Dr. Reed, viewed the body and gave a certificate of accidental death, without making it necessary to hold an inquest. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, in Horscham cemetery.

13 GOOD HORSES AND A COW BURNED

Frank Comly's Barn at Edge Hill, Destroyed Sunday Afternoon—Impossible to Get Out Stock—One Scorched Horse Was Shot—Loss About $10,000.

Fire was discovered in the large stable of Frank Comly, of Edge Hill, road, Edge Hill, on Sunday afternoon about 2.30 o'clock, which completely destroyed the structure. When discovered the fire had gotten such headway that Mr. Comly and his son John could not save any of the horses, although two were gotten out, which had to be afterward killed.

The alarms were turned into the different local companies which responded promptly, but out of the start of the fire their combined efforts did not save the stable although all of the outbuildings were saved.

The stable was a place of safety as were a few carts, but most of the stock of grain and hay and general contents of the stable were destroyed, together with 13 horses and one cow. The barn and contents were worth in the neighborhood of $10,000 and was partly covered by insurance.

Fire companies responded from Edge Hill, Camp Hill, Groveland, Abington, Glenside and Jenkintown, and all did excellent work.

This is the second fire that Mr. Comly has had in the past ten years. At the first fire Mr. Comly had a most serious loss, the loss of the horse gotten out was so badly burned that he had to be shot.

When he broke out in Lehman & Sons' meat store, Doylestown, on Tuesday, the fire laddies had a hard fight to save part of the building and prevent the fire from spreading to nearby buildings.

Improvements Near Fern Rock.

The neighborhood of Fern Rock station is most interested in the proposed paving and macadamizing of Chelton avenue from York road east to Fifth street. The street has recently been opened under the North Penn. tracks of the Reading railway. When it is put in good order for travel it is expected to take much traffic from Green Lane which has a dangerous grade crossing at Fern Rock. It is expected that the railroad station will be removed to Chelton avenue. Chelton avenue is now a thoroughfare all the way from Fifth street to and across Germantown, and is certain to become one of the leading highways in the northern section of the city. East of the railroad it has been opened to 80 feet in width as far as Fifth street by the property owners in that section, who have opened and paved a number of important streets between Fifth street and the railroad, and Fifth street and Chelton avenue is a very short distance from the numerous building improvements in that section, who are going up in Olney. Fifth street will soon be built up the entire distance to the City Line, and as it is 80 feet wide, it will be an important highway for that section. The people in Olney are making special efforts to have the trolley line which now runs to Fifth street and Olney avenue, extended northward toward the City Line a distance of a little over ten blocks. This extension with the trolleys would pass Chelton avenue and reach the large population in the eastern section of Oak Lane where large sums have been invested in the work of developing the Oak Lane Park Building Company and other companies. A citizens' meeting was recently held in Olney in furtherance of the improvements. The opening of Chelton avenue is of particular interest to automobilists, as they can now turn east on Chelton avenue to Seventh street and north on the White road to Cheltonham.

NEW MILK SHIPPING STATION
George B. Brown, manager of the H. A. Williams estate, on Friday purchased a tract of land directly opposite the railroad station at Wycombe, of John C. Walton, for $800, on which will be erected a milk receiving station and a feed house. This action was taken upon petition of a number of the residents of the vicinity, and after the deal was consummated Mr. Brown received subscriptions amounting to over $400.

Jennie Leatherman, of same place, Lot on Walnut street, $100. Benjamin F. Nightlinger, Jr., of Jenkintown, to Thomas B. Harper, of same place, Lot, $200. Joseph Hood, of Jenkintown, to Lewis Brother, of Philadelphia, house and lot on Summit avenue, $1. LANDSAL—Irvin L. Kinsey, of Lansdale, to Harry Richardson, of same place, House and lot, $1. NORTH WALES—Evelyn M. Husted, of North Wales, to Frederick C. Eckhardt, of same place, 9 lots, $900. Evelyn M. Husted, of North Wales, to Mary A. Eckhardt, of same place, 3 lots, $300. Evelyn M. Husted, of North Wales, to Mary P. Eckhardt, of same place, Lot, $100. SPRINGFIELD—Christopher S. Patterson, of Philadelphia, to Anna B. Rowland, of Mt. Airy, lot, $1. SPRINGFIELD—Morton Foster, of Wyndmoor, to John J. Flannery, of same place, lot, $100. WHITEMARSH—Julius S. Heyl, of New York, to Calvin Pardee, of Philadelphia, tract of 20 acres, $1. Marcus Y. Bolber, of Philadelphia, to Alter Unterberger, of same place, House and lot, $1.

Builders are estimating on plans for a 2 1/2 story stone stucco house, 38 feet by 34 feet, at 233 Summit avenue, Jenkintown, for George A. Denay.

Noah Fisher has bought the property he occupies on West State street, Doylstown, from the estate of the late Edward Hemmery.

Frank Mauran has sold to J. A. Anderson the three-story stone Colonial residence, 845 Anderson street, Stenton, for a consideration not disclosed. The lot has a frontage of 40 feet with a depth of 125 feet.

Settlement has just been made for the 28-acre tract situated in White Marsh, just north of Fort Side line, that Maurice J. Hoover, real estate broker, of Philadelphia, sold to Julia S. Hoyt, of New York City, to Calvin Pardee. Also settlement has been made for a part of the 44-acre tract situated in Springfield township east of Chestnut Hill from C. Stuart Patterson to Anna B. Rowland.

Schermerhorn & Phillips are preparing plans for a one-story bank building of Chest Hill station with limestone trimmings, to be built in Ambler for the First National Bank. The building will be constructed that if necessary a second or third story may be added. The same architect has made a contract with Stewart M. Woodward, for a stone residence at Ambler, for Harvey B. Allen.

LUCRETIA MOTT PLACE SOLD.

It is reported that the firm of Wm. F. Roberts & Son, real estate operators, Land Title Building, have just made settlement for a tract of land situated over the estate sold by them, for Edward M. Wistar. Property is located on the west side of Old York road, between Oak Lane and Oak Avenue, Oak Lane. This property is one of the oldest land marks on York road, having previously been the home of Mrs. Lucretia Mott, for many years; she having passed away in this quiet old mansion on November 11th, 1888. It is surrounded with a rustic stone wall, old shrubbery and massive trees. It has for many years been the residence of Mr. Wistar. Its location has no equal. It adjoins and overlooks the estate of the late William L. Elkins, John Stetson and others. It is adjacent to the homes and estates of numerous Philadelphia citizens, such as George W. Elkins, P. B. Widener, Esq., Theodore Voorhees, Vice President Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, E. Carson, Esq., Miller and others, and is convenient to both Elkins Park and Oak Lane stations on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad.

Ground was broken Monday for a new single house to be built at the corner of the Franklin and Wood streets, Doylstown, by Claude S. Wetherill.

P. C. Michaelson is taking estimates on plans for two two-and-a-half-story houses, 4x22 feet and 30x30 feet, to be built at Jenkintown, for W. Howard West.

The three-story stone dwelling at the southeast corner of 6th street and 67th avenue, Oak Lane, has been sold by Horace D. Reeve & Co. for the Rev. Alexander Eiler, to William W. Hancock, Jr., who will occupy it this spring.

Horace D. Reeve & Co., real estate brokers, have sold for the Rev. Alexander Eiler to William W. Hancock, a three-story stone dwelling, lot 60 feet by 120 feet, at the southeast corner of Sixth street and 67th avenue, Oak Lane. The consideration is not disclosed.

The Sedgewick Farms Company, which is developing the Sedgewick Hill branch of the Reading Railway, has almost completed several new houses on the tract, which will be ready, it is expected, for the spring market. The company has already built 58 artistic homes on the tract, and it is expected, nearly all of which have been sold and are occupied. Prices have been from $5000 to $27,000.

TOLL BRIDGES MAY BE FREED

There are 26 Across the Delaware River—Several in Bucks County.

The State Commission charged with the investigation of the cost and methods of freeing the toll bridges which cross the Delaware river between Pennsylvania and New York and New Jersey will file a report recommending proceeding to free twenty-six such bridges between Trenton and Hancock, the latter point being almost on the line of New York and Pennsylvania at the extreme northeastern corner of this State.

The commission is composed of Representative Alfred Marvin, of Pike county; Senator Clarence J. Buckman, of Bucks, and ex-Senator M. C. Rowland, of Pike. The members present spent part of last summer and fall investigating the matter and will urge that the State begin proceedings to free the bridges. It is estimated that the cost will reach $500,000.

Agitation for freeing these bridges has been going on for years, but the commission which is about to report is the first to obtain data as to the number of bridges and the cost. It is proposed to follow up the report with a bill which will pave the way for condemnation of the bridges.

Lower Merion has a public school of five grades in which there are but six pupils—that at Mount Pleasant. It is proposed to provide transportation for the children to Bryn Mawr and assign the teacher to the Ashland school, which is overcrowded.

In our advertising columns will be found the card of James L. Rymer, the well-known dealer in seed potatoes, who's headquarters are at the potato yard, Second and Master, Philadelphia. Mr. Rymer has a large trade among the farmers through this section and is noted for his square dealings. He owns a farm in the heart of the potato seed country in New York state, where he has a large acquaintance with potato growers. His stock for this year is in the neighborhood of 50,000 bushels and he already has sold 64 cars for this spring's delivery. Mr. Rymer is much interested in his York county potatoes, taking pride in his care and assisting farmers in that section. Last summer he built a large barn, where considerable of his potatoes are stored.

The Cake That Billy Bought

A Valentine Story
By MARTHA J. TOWNE

Copyright by American Press Association, Inc.

The door of the Woman's Exchange swung open and closed behind Billy Delwin's broad back. For an instant he hesitated, hesitated by a battery of feminine eyes. Then he strode forward to the counter, where under glass cases were arranged handsome and toothsome cakes of every description and variety.

With his hat under his arm he stared down at the cakes with a calculating eye. "I want a plum cake," he said finally. "Have you got one today?"

"Wait a minute," And the woman disappeared, presently returning with a large box, which she opened and disclosed under tissue paper wrappings a huge round cake.

Billy's eyes sparkled dangerously as he surveyed the beautiful cake. "I'll take it," he said quickly. Then he added a question, "Is it plum cake?"

"Yes, indeed, and perfectly delicious," said the woman enthusiastically.

Then it was that he summoned courage to lean forward and ask a question in a low voice, "Is it against the rule to mention the name of the member who baked this cake?"

"The cash register clanked noisily as the woman turned away. "Against the rules," she said crisply.

"May I inquire," persisted Billy hesitatingly, his voice still lower, "if this cake was baked—or—by an old lady?"

The attendant smiled shrewdly over her shoulder. "It's against the rules to mention ages also," she returned.

Once in the street he bowed a card and was conveyed with more or less rapidity to his bachelor rooms. He took the cake from its box.

"I dunno. That's more like it than any of 'em," he muttered as he went to and fro, hastily removing the things from his library table. Then he laid several clean white towels on the polished surface and, bringing from various places of concealment a number of large round frosted cakes, he placed

WALL JONES
"It's got you now, PHYLIS GILES."

There were seven in all.

"Looks like a cake sale," he grinned somewhat anxiously. "I hope none of the chaps happen in. They'll think I'm all off if they see this layout; but, my George, I'll find her if it takes the pest of my life!"

He walked around the table, surveying its toothsome burden with a critical eye. Of all the cakes he decided that his last purchase was the handsomest, the lightest and the most deliciously fragrant.

"Now for a taste," he said, plunging a silver knife in the first one. The slice was clean and yellow and full of currants. Billy wrinkled his nose disdainfully and laid down the slice.

"Phyllis never made that one," he commented. "Her cakes always have raisins in. Now for the next one!"

One after another he tried the different cakes, sniffing, tasting, examining and shaking his head dubiously after each operation.

At last he came to his latest purchase, the Valentine cake, and if you watched him closely they might have observed that his cheeks paled and his firm lips were compressed into straight colorless lines. Suddenly he groaned and laid down the knife.

"If this one shouldn't be here?" he muttered desperately, and then, with an upraising of his handsome head, he plunged the knife into the cake near the edge, careful not to disturb the decorations that adorned the top. He drew out a piece, yellow and rich and crumbly, full of green raisins and they flicks of spite.

With the air of one participating in some great mystery Billy Delwin ate the cake slowly, enjoying to the full the elusive flavor. When he had finished he laid down the knife and sat down in a big leather covered chair, the color flooding his tanned cheeks.

"I've found her! I've found her at last!" he cried exultantly. "Nobody in the world ever baked that cake except Phyllis Giles! She made one last year for her Valentine party—same size, same flavor, same decoration—and you can't fool me, sir!"

He turned the cake slowly around and stared at all sides. "Her hands made it," she touched it, and she placed all those little hard red hearts about the edge, and not one of those hearts is harder than Phyllis's own heart or she would never have hidden herself away from me in this manner. As if Mr. Giles' failure and suicide could make any other difference to me than to feel more tenderness toward her! If nothing had happened or if Phyllis had not hidden away after it was over we should have been married by this time instead of my following up the only clew I ever could get—that she had come to New York and was baking cakes for the Woman's Exchange. I've got her, I've got her, and every exchange in the city, I believe, until the women look on me with suspicion. He sat for a long time in this time instead of my following up the only clew I ever could get—that she had come to New York and was baking cakes for the Woman's Exchange.

The last purchase he wrapped carefully and replaced in its box. Then he got into his overcoat, he picked up his hat and with the cake under his arm he sought the street. Presently he was once more standing before the counter in the Woman's Exchange.

The tea tables were empty now, and there was no one around save the stern visaged woman who had waited upon him earlier in the afternoon.

"Will you kindly hand your rule and tell me the name of the young lady who made this cake?" he asked with the keenest anxiety in his deep voice. "It is impossible," said the woman primly.

"Would you forward a letter to her if I should write one?" persisted Billy. "Certainly not!" And her shocked expression was the first glimpse of humor that Billy had seen in the dull fabric of this wearisome case since the girl he loved.

"Will you call her on the telephone and allow me to talk with her?" persisted Billy. "Really, madam, you will be making two people very happy?"

"I could not do that either. I am very sorry, sir, but it seems to me that Miss Giles really wanted to see you who would not withhold her address. The woman dashed with vexation at the slip she had made in thus revealing the name Billy had been longing to hear."

"It is Phyllis, then," he cried triumphantly. "I knew that cake. No body in the world can make a plum cake like Phyllis," he explained with enthusiasm. "The moment I tasted it I knew."

The harsh face softened a little. "Her cakes are different from the others," she said unwarmly. "She said once that she could make cakes better than anything else in the world, and so she thought that she was the thing she ought to do to gain a livelihood."

"Bliss her heart!" muttered Billy under his breath, knowing well that if he had his own way that Phyllis' delicate fingers should never bake a cake in the world unless it was for some special treat like St. Valentine's day.

"Do you know what my tomorrow will be?" he demanded suddenly.

The woman stared. "Valentine's day, of course," she said, buying herself of the sales in the glass case.

"Well, that's the day when separated sweethearts are reunited, you know," he burst out sheepishly.

"Sooner than I die if I could help any one along in that way I'd be glad to!"

"It isn't part of the business," said the woman impatiently. "Really, sir, I'd like to help you out, but I simply cannot divulge the names of our members."

"Very well, madam," cried Billy grimly. "I'll find her without your help, and when I do you'll lose the best cake maker in your membership!"

The door closed softly behind his indignantly ringing form, and the woman stared after him for a brief moment. "I wonder," she muttered softly—"I wonder if it would have done any harm to have told him; he had a good face and he seemed so much in earnest, and, just as he said, tomorrow is Valentine's day!"

In the street, Billy paused for a moment and looked up and down. Suddenly a little black gown emerged from the crowd and paused for an instant before the door of the exchange and then laid a tentative hand on the knob.

Billy Delwin was beside her in an instant.

"Phyllis!" he cried sharply. "I've got you now, and you can't lose me again!"

She uttered a little frightened cry and turned a white face up to his. "Oh, Billy, Billy!" she gasped. "Where did you come from?"

"I just came out of this exchange, where the hearts of the attendants are harder than the little red hearts on your Valentine plum cake, for they won't let me divide your address, though I begged almost on my knees. But I've got you now, Phyllis Giles! Don't you dare enter that oven's den again!"

He drew her trembling form close to him, and they stood in the shadow of the doorway, her slight form leaning against his.

"How did you know, Billy? How did you find me out?" asked Phyllis after a little silence.

Billy told her of his quest for the cakes, of the slight clew he had followed and of his purchase that night of the Valentine plum cake, which he recognized to be his husband's.

"Darling," he whispered after it had been told. "Tomorrow is St. Valentine's day. You have baked this cake, and on it you have asked the question, 'Will you be my Valentine?' Now, I thought that cake and take it upon myself to answer that question. I will be your Valentine under one condition."

"What is that?" asked Phyllis.

"That you will admit that you're sorry that I bought the cake!"

"Sorry?" echoed Phyllis joyfully. "Why, Billy, I was thinking of you when I made it, and I splashed so many tears over the little red hearts that they bled, and I had to replace them with others. Billy Delwin, I thought you'd never come!"

Plattery is a sort of bad money to which our vanity gives currency.

A man takes almost as much pleasure in keeping a secret as a woman does in telling one.

The last purchase he wrapped carefully and replaced in its box. Then he got into his overcoat, he picked up his hat and with the cake under his arm he sought the street. Presently he was once more standing before the counter in the Woman's Exchange.

NESHAMINY

Andrew Bonner is quite ill.

Many of the country folks are on the sick list.

Winfield Cregor is seriously ill at his home.

The Street road east of the pike is in a bad condition.

Mrs. O. P. Titus and Albert Worthington are on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Beck are rejoicing over a little baby in their home.

Miss Alma Wilgus has returned to her home from St. Luke's Hospital.

The new house of John Weir is under foot. The structure is a fine residence.

Miss Sophia R. Worthington, of Philadelphia, spent the week-end with Miss Rita Lout.

The special of Coney's Memorial M. E. church was entertained at the home of Aaron Griffin, on Saturday evening.

The ladies of the Coney's M. E. church are preparing to hold their annual supper, which will be held on March 11th.

McKINLEY

P. C. Madeira is convalescing. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

The fire truck is returned to the fire house thoroughly renovated, and presents a very handsome appearance.

Thomas Leary moved to Ashbourne on his new home.

He did not secure the house on Oscoda avenue, to which he intended to move last week.

The T. J. S. met at the home of J. Higgins on Friday evening, 17th. The usual business and gastronomic feast were successfully performed.

Mr. McCormick, of Cypress avenue, died on Thursday morning, 17th.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the family in their bereavement.

The community was shocked to hear of the sudden death of Miss Mary E. Sullivan, of Kintana Park, on Saturday last, and desire to express their sympathy to the family.

The fire company of McKinley have received 350 feet of hose as their share of the appropriation donated by the Commissioners of Abington township. They have now a total of 650 feet of hose.

The committee in charge of entertainments, having abandoned the projected benefit at the opera house, will after the lesson session, announce a tea on Thursday next in the school house.

The proceeds to be used in procuring rubber boots, and other necessary clothing suitable for fire fighting. This is a most needed equipment for our brave ladies and should receive a generous response.

LIQUOR LICENSE FIGHT NOW ON

John Megerle has fled at Norristown, his application for a liquor license here, has been opposed and there is strong opposition among our people to the granting of this license.

A meeting of protest was recently held at the fire house, which was addressed by Robert Adams, of Melrose Park, secretary of the Central branch of the Y. M. C. A. Rev. Mr. Shay, Rev. Mr. Dalmier, James McIntyre and others.

Attorney Theodore Lane Bean has been employed to represent the remonstrants, and a committee has been appointed to appear at Norristown and make protest in court against granting the license.

From Norristown comes the information that the signers to the Megerle petition include:

Christopher Koehle, gardener; John Dwyer, teamster; Henry Kuppinger, cigar manufacturer; William Adams, cementer; Arthur Hardman, machinist; August Mohrer, cigar manufacturer; Harry Gamble, teamster; John M. Koerber, machinist; John H. Hooper, manufacturer; George Eweson, carpenter; John Unger, Sr., shoemaker; Kilian Kuntzman, machinist; Paul R. Evans, shoemaker; William H. Hoover, hatter; Ernest Ribben, druggist; Simon Dringer, shoemaker.

The court will hear testimony concerning the need or lack of need of the license toward the latter part of next month.

Mrs. William Wilkins has been on the sick list.

An oyster supper was given last Saturday evening by the I. S. L.

Miss Effie Conklin recently visited her brother, Charles D. Conklin and family in New York.

Mr. DuBois will make extensive alterations and improvements to some of his houses this spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Rohman have rented one of Charles D. Conklin's houses at 116 Franklin street.

Mrs. George Hulseher and son, Alvin, returned visitors to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Gallagher, in Philadelphia.

The regular monthly meeting of the "Circle" was held at the home of Mrs. John Houldin. There was a good attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fullam have vacated Mr. DuBois's house on Rebers avenue and have moved into the Durshopp house on Franklin street.

The Helmsman family have moved from one of Mr. DuBois's houses on Rebers avenue, to a property on Lehigh street near Second Street pike.

William Rice, the aged father of John Rice, who resides on Beecher street and Mrs. David Lyster, who resides on Second Street pike, are at the home of the latter, and fears are entertained for his safety.

Rice is one of the oldest brothers, who for years, were successful fishermen along the Delaware river, and has since retired from that occupation, a number of years ago.

The funeral of the late Carolina, wife of Mr. John Houldin, was held last week from her late residence, 5015 Penitence street, Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Reilly, who reside in our village, died a few months ago, when they moved to Illinois, but were forced on account of Mrs. Reilly's health to return to this country.

They were well known in this village, and the deceased was an active member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Cheltenham Fire Company. She is survived by a husband, two sons, and a daughter.

BUSTLETON

To Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lodge, a son.

Miss Margaret Kehoe had company on Sunday.

1904-47

How Are You, Friend?

When spring comes round, do you feel weak and languid, and are you troubled by biliousness and indigestion, and by a heavy, sluggish, lifeless feeling?

Are you ever troubled with humors or eruptions or pimples?

When you get a cut or scratch, is it slow to heal and apt to fester?

Are you troubled with a thick, muddy complexion, or with blackheads or blotches?

Do you have cold-sores or styes or run-rounds?

Do you ever have boils or abscesses?

Did you ever suffer from a carbuncle?

Or a felon?

Have you had running, open sores or ulcers which would not heal?

Do you have swellings or tumors? Are you of a scrofulous tendency?

Are you subject to chills and fever or any form of malaria?

Are you pale and is your blood thin and watery?

If so, the trouble is in the blood. There is scarcely a family which does not suffer at times in some of these ways; and all man, woman or child, need to put their blood in good condition by taking

Pinkham's Blood Purifier

See What It Did for This Girl

"It is with a feeling of gratitude that I write to you, for after taking your medicine for some time I feel that I am a new woman."

"I was always so bloodless, my blood was almost turned to water; was languid and weak. The doctors had all given me up."

"I took Pinkham's Blood Purifier and it was not long before I was perfectly cured and was strong and well again."

Maione Rowsey, Deliver, Iowa.

OBITUARY

ISAAC FUNK

Isaac Funk, a prominent farmer and owner of Forest Park, Chalfont, died at his home in New Britain township, on Sunday, aged 80 years. Pneumonia was the cause of death.

Mr. Funk lived in the vicinity of Chalfont all his life and about twenty-five years ago purchased and moved to the farm where he lived until he died. He followed the occupation of farming all his life and was considered one of the wealthiest men in New Britain township.

About twenty years ago Mr. Funk owned and equipped Forest Park, which at once became a popular summer resort. It is located near the borough of Chalfont.

Mr. Funk is survived by two children: Sylvester Funk, at home and Mrs. Violetta Thierolf, of Philadelphia; two brothers, Henry and David, both of Lansdale, and one sister, Mrs. Austin Griffiths, of Chalfont.

The funeral was held on Thursday, interment in the New Britain burying grounds. Services were conducted by the Rev. John Meighan, of the New Britain Baptist church.

MRS. CHRISTIAN MYERS

Phoebe Ann Myers, wife of Christian Myers, died at her late residence in Carversville, on Wednesday, February 18th.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers celebrated their golden wedding, September 23d, 1868 and had passed the 52nd anniversary of their marriage.

She was of Quaker stock and always believed in the teachings of the Society of Friends. She was the daughter of the late Stephen G. and Mary W. Bavington, of Bethayres, and is survived by three children: Mrs. Anna Neville, of Philadelphia; N. J.; Mrs. Carrie B. Spencer, of Newark, N. J.; nine grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

Two brothers, Thomas Bavington, of Somerset, and Alfred J. Bavington, of Fox Chase, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Henry C. Myers of Mechanicsville.

GRENABLE

Bart Walton haled about fifty tons of hay for Edward Luff last week.

Miss Anna Coe was a visitor in Philadelphia on Saturday.

Harry Ramsey has been sick with grip, but is better at this time.

Many from this locality attended the institute at Richboro this week.

Edward Luff has ordered an E. M. P. 30-horse power auto, in the report.

D. S. Zehner of Tanamasa, Pa., was a visitor at J. M. VanSant's one day last week.

Misses Minnie Donahower and Marie Keyser were Saturday and Sunday visitors in Philadelphia.

ROSLYN

Colonel Lewis and wife entertained company on Sunday.

Miss Helen Stitz entertained company over the week-end.

Torrie Thomsen has been confined to his home this week.

The work on Dr. Wilson's handsome bungalow is progressing slowly.

Mrs. Arthur Dale, of Ashbourne, was a guest at Arbutha hall on Monday.

Our popular contractor is employed as driver by R. D. Neely this week.

Mrs. Eugene Moll, of Bridgeport, N. J., was the guest of Mrs. Charles Schmidt.

Miss Joseph L. Tull attended the birthday reception given to John Lauer of Abington, on last Thursday.

Miss Lillie Knorr attended the social given by her Sunday school teacher at her home in Abington on Tuesday.

Mrs. and Mrs. Will Thomsen moved away from our town on Wednesday. This makes another vacant house for some one to occupy.

Misses Heister and Winifred Rees attended the confirmation services at St. Paul's P. E. church of Ashbourne on Sunday to see Miss Helen and Edmund Dale confirmed.

During the icy weather of last week one of the horses driven to a hearse fell down on the hill, and the cemetery wagon was called to convey the corpse to the rest of the way.

A carload of granite came for the Hillside Granite Company this past week. It was a stone weighing seven tons took one-half day to unload and seven of Robert Neely's horses to pull it.

Jacob Faust's mother-in-law died at his home on Monday. The funeral was held on Friday, with high mass at St. Luke's church, Glenside, and interment was made at Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

Eight-year-old Emma Ehret, daughter of John Ehret, of No. 925 West 6th street, formerly of Roslyn, was on her way to the Simon Muir public school, Germantown and Allegheny avenues, was struck by a fender of south-bound Wilkes-Barre trolley and dragged under the wheels.

She was taken to the Samaritan hospital where it was found she was suffering from a slight concussion of the brain and badly bruised body and limbs.

Last Thursday a trolley car struck a wagon at Bradford road, smashing the wagon over, breaking the harness, and stifling the horses. The driver reported that no bell was rung. The conductors and motorman have a lot of giving the bell to one another rather than talking across the pikes and wait until they do not pretend to stop at it.
